Pope Francis Promulgates New Legislation for the Celebration of the Pre-Conciliar Liturgy

With Traditionis custodes, an Apostolic letter issued motu proprio on July 16, 2021, Pope Francis has modified the conditions under which the liturgical books in use prior to the reforms following the Second Vatican Council may be celebrated. The Apostolic Letter was accompanied by a letter from the Holy Father, dated the same day, addressed to the bishops of the world and providing a fuller explanation for the rationale behind the new legislation.

In the letter, Pope Francis observes that Pope St. John Paul II and Pope Benedict XVI permitted ongoing use of the pre-conciliar liturgy for the sake of healing schism and with the intention of fostering unity in the Church. This permission was given by popes who believed that it would undermine neither the legitimacy of the liturgical reforms called for by the Council Fathers nor the authority by which the reformed books were promulgated. Pope Benedict was particularly optimistic that the co-existence of the older and newer forms of worship would not cause division in parishes and that the two forms “would enrich one another.”

Pope Francis, however, expresses a sadness that, with the passage of time, he believes the generosity of his predecessors “was exploited to widen the gaps, reinforce the divergences, and encourage disagreements that injure the Church, block her path, and expose her to the peril of division.” Therefore, he has decided to abrogate some of the earlier permissions and to place greater oversight in this area under the authority of each diocesan bishop. At the same time, the Holy Father reminded the bishops of their duty to “be vigilant in ensuring that the liturgy be celebrated with decorum and fidelity to the liturgical books promulgated after Vatican Council II.”

The full text of the Apostolic Letter is available at Vatican.va/content/francesco/en/motu_proprio/documents/20210716-motu-proprio-traditionis-custodes.html, and its accompanying letter may be found at Vatican.va/content/francesco/en/letters/2021/documents/20210716-lettera-vescovi-liturgia.html.

May the unity in the Church desired by the Holy Father come to fruition. For the benefit of our readers, the norms articulated in Traditionis custodes are excerpted here:

Art. 1. The liturgical books promulgated by Saint Paul VI and Saint John Paul II, in conformity with the decrees of Vatican Council II, are the unique expression of the lex orandi of the Roman Rite.

- Art. 2. It belongs to the diocesan bishop, as moderator, promoter, and guardian of the whole liturgical life of the particular Church entrusted to him,⁵ to regulate the liturgical celebrations of his diocese.⁶ Therefore, it is his exclusive competence to authorize the use of the 1962 Roman Missal in his diocese, according to the guidelines of the Apostolic See.
- Art. 3. The bishop of the diocese in which until now there exist one or more groups that celebrate according to the Missal antecedent to the reform of 1970:
- § 1. is to determine that these groups do not deny the validity and the legitimacy of the liturgical reform, dictated by Vatican Council II and the Magisterium of the Supreme Pontiffs;
 - § 2. is to designate one or more locations where the faithful adherents of these groups may gather for the eucharistic celebration (not however in the parochial churches and without the erection of new personal parishes);
 - § 3. is to establish at the designated locations the days on which eucharistic celebrations are permitted using the Roman Missal promulgated by Saint John XXIII in 1962.⁷ In these celebrations the readings are proclaimed in the vernacular language, using translations of the Sacred Scripture approved for liturgical use by the respective Episcopal Conferences;
 - § 4. is to appoint a priest who, as delegate of the bishop, is entrusted with these celebrations and with the pastoral care of these groups of the faithful. This priest should be suited for this responsibility, skilled in the use of the Missale Romanum antecedent to the reform of 1970, possess a knowledge of the Latin language sufficient for a thorough comprehension of the rubrics and liturgical texts, and be animated by a lively pastoral charity and by a sense of ecclesial communion. This priest should have at heart not only the correct celebration of the liturgy, but also the pastoral and spiritual care of the faithful;
 - § 5. is to proceed suitably to verify that the parishes canonically erected for the benefit of these faithful are effective for their spiritual growth, and to determine whether or not to retain them;
 - § 6. is to take care not to authorize the establishment of new groups.
- Art. 4. Priests ordained after the publication of the present Motu Proprio, who wish to celebrate using the Missale Romanum of 1962, should submit a formal request to the diocesan Bishop who shall consult the Apostolic See before granting this authorization.
- Art. 5. Priests who already celebrate according to the Missale Romanum of 1962 should request from the diocesan Bishop the authorization to continue to enjoy this faculty.
- Art. 6. Institutes of consecrated life and Societies of apostolic life, erected by the Pontifical Commission Ecclesia Dei, fall under the competence of the Congregation for Institutes of Consecrated Life and Societies for Apostolic Life.
- Art. 7. The Congregation for Divine Worship and the Discipline of the Sacraments and the Congregation for Institutes of Consecrated Life and Societies of Apostolic Life, for matters of their particular competence, exercise the authority of the Holy See with respect to the observance of these provisions.
- Art. 8. Previous norms, instructions, permissions, and customs that do not conform to the provisions of the present Motu Proprio are abrogated.

Publication of Ordination of a Bishop, of Priests, and of Deacons: An Occasion for a Renewed Liturgical Celebration

An English translation of the second typical edition of De Ordinatione Episcopi, presbyterorum et diaconorum, carried out according to the principles of Liturgiam authenticam, has been in use in the dioceses of the United States since 2003. The upcoming publication of a new English translation, while not structurally distinct from the previous translation, is nevertheless an occasion for a renewed celebration of the sacrament of Holy Orders in the United States, especially in its ecclesial aspects.

Holy Orders as a “Celebration of the Church” (Sacrosanctum Concilium, no. 26)

Who celebrates the sacrament of Holy Orders? In a strict sense, the minister of the sacrament is a bishop. Still, as with the other sacraments and liturgies, it is the totus Christus (whole Christ), Head and Body, who celebrates the sacrament of ordination. This truth is beautifully expressed in the homily at the Rite of Admission to Candidacy for Holy Orders. Addressing all who are present, the bishop declares, “It is to us [the Lord] entrusts the task of making inquiry concerning the suitability of the candidates. Only after they have been duly tested, shall we call them and, by the particular seal of the Holy Spirit, ordain them for the ministry of God and the Church” (Appendix II, no. 8). The Church as a communion hierarchically ordered celebrates the sacrament of Holy Orders.

The fact that it is the Church who carries out this sacrament is also seen throughout the rite itself. First, prior to the liturgy of ordination, the local Church is called to pray for those to be ordained, especially in the Universal Prayer of the Mass and in the Intercessions of Evening Prayer. In the preparation for the celebration, all the communities of the diocese are made ready. Special care is given to the convocation of a large gathering of the faithful since ordination is an act of the local Church which affects the local Church.

Following the proclamation of the Gospel, the Church asks the principal ordaining bishop to confer ordination (in the case of a bishop), or she asks the bishop to elect the candidates and to confer ordination (in the case of priests and deacons). At the ordination of priests and deacons, the bishop declares, “We choose,” highlighting the ecclesial character of election to Holy Orders. To this declaration or to the reading of the mandate of the Apostolic See at the ordination of a bishop, the entire Church responds, “Thanks be to God.”

Once the homily and the promises of the elect have taken place, those gathered participate in the Litany of Supplication, and following it, rise or remain standing. This posture signifies the assembly’s active participation in the elements which follow. At the ordination of a bishop, the principal ordaining bishop and all bishops lay hands. At the ordination of a priest, the ordaining bishop and all priests lay hands. At the ordination of a deacon, the bishop alone lays hands. Through it all, the faithful stand. They are not idle spectators but participants in a liturgical act carried out by the whole Church. While the ordaining bishop proclaims the Prayer of Ordination (with all bishops speaking the sacramental formula of the Prayer of Ordination to the episcopate), the whole Church joins in this prayer. At its conclusion, those gathered respond, “Amen.”

The Litany of Supplication as an Act of Ecclesial Waiting

In the sacraments, the Church worships God. She is built up and her members are made holy. These truths are vividly expressed in the Litany of Supplication at the liturgies of ordination, carried out by the whole Church immediately before the laying on of hands and Prayer of Ordination. The earliest orders of Roman ordination to the diaconate, presbyterate, and episcopate include this element in the very same position. In the post-conciliar liturgies of the Roman Catholic Church, a litany like this one is also carried out at Christian Initiation at the Easter Vigil, the Commendation of the Dying, Exorcism, the Blessing of an Abbot or Abbess, Religious Profession, Consecration of a Virgin, and Dedication of a Church and an Altar. While the litany may accompany movement at Christian Initiation, in these other liturgies, it is carried out while stationary.

In carrying out these litanies, the Church participates in the prayerful waiting of the communion of saints for the Holy Spirit, begun by the apostles, Mary, and other disciples in the upper room at Pentecost. In the bidding before each litany and the orations following them, the Church asks God to make her fruitful by the power of the Holy Spirit. Each litany begins with an invocation of God’s mercy, “Kyrie, eleison” (“Lord, have mercy”). Saint John Chrysostom, among other patristic writers, drew connections between the Greek imperative verb ἐλέησον (“have mercy”) and the Greek word for olive oil, ἔλαιον. This play on words helps to reveal more fully the petition’s meaning. In various cultures, olive oil seasons food, strengthens the body, heals wounds, and illumines the night. In both the Old and New Testaments, Jesus’s titles of Messiah and Christ (Anointed One) carry with them the idea of oil. St. Paul uses the olive tree as an image for Christ and Christians: Jesus is the olive tree and Christians are his branches (Rom 11:11-24). And so, when the Church prays “Lord, have mercy” in these litanies, she asks the Lord to be oil for her, to anoint her. She asks the Lord to graft her more fully as branches in the olive tree which is Christ. She asks for the grace of a particular participation in the life of Christ, whether that be the participation which comes from Christian Initiation, Holy Orders, etc. The litany also invokes Mary and the saints since they are not strangers to the prayer of the pilgrim Church. The expectant Church on earth is in communion with the expectant Church in heaven.

The First Exercise of Holy Orders in the Eucharist, the Sacrament of Ecclesial Unity

In the earliest orders of Roman ordination, the rites immediately following the Prayer of Ordination are few. Having been clothed in sacred vestments prior to the Prayer of Ordination, the first acts of the newly ordained minister are to exchange a kiss of peace and exercise his eucharistic ministry. Following the Prayer of Ordination to the diaconate, the newly ordained deacon exchanges a kiss with the bishop and the priests and then stands at the bishop’s right, where he assists at the celebration of the Eucharist for the first time. A newly ordained priest exchanges a kiss with the same persons and then stands among the presbyterate, where he concelebrates the Eucharist for the first time. A newly ordained bishop exchanges a kiss with the Roman Pontiff, other bishops, and priests. Then, he assumes the episcopal chair, where he presides at the Eucharist for the first time. Having received the grace of Holy Orders, the newly ordained person’s first act is to establish ecclesial communion through the kiss of peace and carry out the sacrament of ecclesial communion according to the order received.

The introduction of each post-conciliar rite of ordination highlights this fundamental truth: “In the Liturgy of the Eucharist the newly ordained Priests [Deacons] exercise their ministry for the first time” (nos. 114, 189); and “Within his own diocese it is most fitting that the newly ordained Bishop preside at the concelebration of the Liturgy of the Eucharist” (no. 27). The celebration of the Eucharist is the preeminent act for these orders at the service of communion since it is the Eucharist that brings about the unity of Christ’s Mystical Body.

Chant Settings of Ordination of a Bishop, of Priests, and of Deacons

The first Latin typical edition of the post-conciliar rites of Ordination was published by the Vatican Press in 1968, and that book included Gregorian chant settings for several texts, including the introductions and conclusions of the litanies, the Prayers of Ordination, chants for use during the fraternal kiss and other ritual actions, and the proper texts of the Hanc igitur to be inserted in the Eucharistic Prayer. However, when ICEL published its definitive English translation of these rites in The Roman Pontifical in 1978, the only texts set to music were the three Prayers of Ordination, for deacons, for priests, and for a bishop.

The second Latin typical edition published by the Holy See in 1990 likewise included the same chants, except that the proper texts for insertion into the Eucharistic Prayers were no longer set to music. The English translations based on this new edition would follow the lead of the Latin edition much more closely when it came to the musical settings. Both the USCCB edition of the Rites of Ordination published in 2003 and The Roman Pontifical published in 2012 by the Vox Clara Committee of the Congregation for Divine Worship and the Discipline of the Sacraments included musical settings for all the texts that were set to music in the typical edition. These settings accompanying the English texts were modeled on the Gregorian melodies of the typical edition.

The new edition soon to be published by USCCB Communications will continue this recent practice of following the example of the typical edition. The chants of Ordination of a Bishop, of Priests, and of Deacons are similar to those found in the 2003 and 2012 editions, but since the translation is new, ICEL commissioned musicians to prepare new versions of the chants. Like it did for the chants prepared for the recent edition of the Order of the Dedication of a Church and an Altar (described in the May 2018 Newsletter), ICEL again worked to adapt faithfully the melodies of the Gregorian tradition to the English text and aimed to present them in a manner that would be accessible to parish musicians.

The edition being published for use in the dioceses of the United States of America will have a few differences in the music with respect to the earlier editions. For example, when a Psalm accompanies an antiphon, the text of the Psalm (taken from The Abbey Psalms and Canticles) will be pointed and accompanied by a Psalm-tone, whereas the previous English editions presented these texts in modern notation with chords. The new edition will also include in its Appendix musical settings for the entirety of the litanies. Since the cantors lead the invocations of the litany, the body of the ritual text does not need to provide music for the bishop who presides. However, the inclusion of the complete music for the litany in the Appendix might be useful for musicians who assist in the ceremony. Finally, in a departure from previous editions, the musical settings of the Veni, Creator Spiritus and the Te Deum in the Appendix will use English rather than Latin texts, drawn from the new translation of the hymns recently confirmed for the Liturgy of the Hours, Second Edition, currently in preparation.

The new USCCB edition will feature one significant difference from the music of the typical edition. In response to the suggestion of several bishops, separate chants were prepared for both the singular and plural versions of the Prayers of Ordination and the prayers before and after the litanies. Earlier editions of the rites of Ordination, including the Latin typical editions, set just one version of a text to music. For example, the Prayer of Ordination of one bishop is typically set to music, but not the Prayer of Ordination to be used when several bishops are ordained in the same ceremony. Similarly, the Prayers of Ordination for several priests and several deacons are set to music, but not the versions used when only one man is to be ordained. Some editions of the Ordination rites include parenthetical variants within the chant to account for the alternate version, but other books expect the presiding bishop to be able to make those adjustments spontaneously. The chants in the new USCCB edition are arranged in a more user-friendly manner for a bishop who wishes to chant these important texts, and also to help minimize the need to flip between different sections of the book during the course of the ceremony.

“He is the One whom the Father will send you.”

Finally, another minor difference in this new edition with respect to earlier English editions – of interest perhaps only to musicologists! – is the interpretation of the responsory provided for optional use at the fraternal kiss during the ordination of priests. The chant, Iam non dicam vos servos (“I call you servants no longer”), draws from Jesus’ words at the Last Supper in St. John’s Gospel and was traditionally used in the liturgy in association with the celebration of Pentecost. The text in the new English translation reads:

- I call you servants no longer, but my friends, because you know all that I have done in your midst (alleluia).
 - * Receive the Holy Spirit, as an Advocate among you.
 - + He is the One whom the Father will send you (alleluia).
- V. You are my friends, if you do what I command you.
 - * Receive the Holy Spirit, as an Advocate among you.
 - + He is the One whom the Father will send you (alleluia).
- V. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Spirit.
 - + He is the One whom the Father will send you (alleluia).

There is some debate regarding the response following the first versicle, “You are my friends.” The Latin chant abbreviates this response as simply * Accipite (equivalent in the English translation to “* Receive”) and abbreviates the response to the second versicle as simply + Ille est (“+ He is”). Earlier translators interpreted the first abbreviation to refer only to the first half of the response, with the second referring to the second half of the response. However, in carefully researching the history and musical form of this responsory, ICEL’s consultants concluded that the intention of the typical edition is that the abbreviation for the response to the first versicle is meant to signify entire response, while the abbreviation for the response to the second versicle signifies only the second half of the response. This interpretation is now reflected in the text above.

The Lenten version of this responsory as it will appear in the USCCB edition of Ordination of a Bishop, of Priests, and of Deacons is given below. Note especially the beautiful melodic refrain that echoes through the chant, at “know... Spirit... friends... Spirit... be” (lines 2, 3, 5, 6, and 8, respectively). This moving text is certainly fitting for this moment of an ordination, and the traditional Gregorian melodies can stir the soul in prayer and devotion.

I call you servants * no long - er, but my friends,
 be-cause you know all that I have done in your midst.
 * Re - ceive the Ho - ly Spir - it, as an Ad-vo-cate a - mong you. † He is the One whom the Fa-ther will send you.
 V. You are my friends, if you do what I com-mand you.
 * Re - ceive the Ho - ly Spir - it, as an Ad-vo-cate a - mong
 you. † He is the One whom the Father will send you. V. Glo-ry be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Ho - ly Spir - it. † He is the One whom the Father will send you.

The Secretariat of Divine Worship has made the new chants of Ordination of a Bishop, of Priests, and of Deacons available as free PDF downloads on the USCCB website to assist musicians preparing for these important liturgies. They are available at USCCB.org/prayer-and-worship/sacraments-and-sacramentals/holy-orders/ordination-music.

Personal Ordinariates Publish Divine Worship: Pastoral Care of the Sick and Dying

In the spring of 2020, the Personal Ordinariates established under the 2009 Apostolic Constitution Anglicanorum cœtibus – Our Lady of Walsingham (United Kingdom), the Chair of Saint Peter (North America), and Our Lady of the Southern Cross (Oceania) – published Divine Worship: Pastoral Care of the Sick and Dying, its third ritual book after Divine Worship: The Missal and Divine Worship: Occasional Services. This book includes rituals for the Visitation of the Sick and Blessing of a Sick Child; Communion of the Sick (Ordinary and Shorter Rites); Anointing of the Sick Outside of Mass; Continuous Rite of Penance, Anointing, and Viaticum; Supplication for the Dying and Commendation of a Soul; as well as additional prayers which may be used with the above rites. In these rites, the Ordinariates express their liturgical patrimony in the care for the sick, while incorporating other Roman elements never or only briefly expressed in that patrimony. Its sources include the Roman rite used at Sarum, the major revisions of the Church of England's Book of Common Prayer (BCP), the Roman Ritual of 1614, the Episcopal Church's 1928 BCP as well as the Manual for Priests of the American Church, the Anglican Church of Canada's 1962 BCP, and the Roman Rite's 1972 Pastoral Care of the Sick: Rites of Anointing and Viaticum.

Outline of the Rites

In general, the rites of Pastoral Care observe one of two ritual structures: one based on the Order of Visitation found in the use of Sarum and the Book of Common Prayer, and another which more closely follows the contemporary structure of the post-conciliar Roman Rite, borrowing elements from Divine Worship: The Missal's Order of Mass. Visitation of the Sick follows the first structure. It begins with an Introductory Rite consisting of a greeting, a Sentence of scripture, the Our Father (preceded by a litany and followed by a responsory), and an oration. A common recitation of psalmody follows and then the sick person's profession of baptismal faith with the option of confession of sins and absolution. The priest may then anoint the sick person; otherwise, the priest or deacon lays his hand upon him. The rite concludes with a proper blessing.

Communion and Anointing of the Sick follow the second pattern. These rites begin with a greeting and a sprinkling rite, modeled after the 1614 Roman Ritual. The confession and absolution of sins may follow; otherwise, the Penitential Rite occurs, following the form of the Order of Mass. At Communion of the Sick, this introductory rite concludes with the Collect of the day or for the sick. In both rites, readings from Sacred Scripture follow. The assigned Gospel for Communion of the Sick is the same as the 1549 Book of Common Prayer. That of Anointing is the first of several options in the 1614 Roman Ritual's Visitation of the Sick.

In Communion of the Sick, the readings from Sacred Scripture are followed by the Rite of Holy Communion, following the form of the Order of Mass. The Postcommunion Prayer is nearly identical to an oration of Sarum, the 1614 Roman Ritual, as well as the post-conciliar Roman rites of Communion for the Sick. The rite concludes with a blessing after the form of the Order of Mass, and a reposition of the Blessed Sacrament, modeled after the 1614 Roman Ritual.

At Anointing of the Sick, the Rite of Anointing follows the Gospel. This rite begins with a litany, whose structure and style are Anglican and whose petitions resemble those of the contemporary Roman rite. The Priest then lays hands on the sick person and may accompany this gesture with an exorcistic prayer from the 1614 Roman Ritual. Structurally, this prayer occupies the same place as the Blessing or Thanksgiving of Oil in the contemporary Roman Rite. The anointing formula follows and is identical to the Roman Rite. Then, the same Our Father unit from the Visitation of the Sick is carried out and concludes with an oration that recalls God's declaration through the Apostle James regarding care for the sick, and implores God to heal and forgive the sick person that he may be restored to his former way of life. This element of Our Father-and-oration is nearly identical to that of Anointing in the 1614 Roman Ritual. The rite concludes with a blessing after the form of the Order of Mass.

Particular Elements

Further attention to certain elements from Pastoral Care stands to enrich the celebration of care for the sick in the Roman Rite.

Use of Scripture – Pastoral Care makes wide use of Sacred Scripture as antiphons, responsories, and readings. Pastoral Care also utilizes the direct recitation of psalmody by those gathered at the Visitation of the Sick and the Blessing of a Sick Child, similar to the use of psalmody in the Liturgy of the Hours. This use of psalmody is a common feature of both the Anglican and Roman traditions of pastoral care. In the post-conciliar Roman rites of care for the sick, psalmody is used most frequently in responsorial form. Nevertheless, its direct, common recitation is not excluded, especially in the Visitation of the Sick and the Commendation of the Dying.

Profession of baptismal faith – The Order of Visitation of the Sick used at Sarum includes a lengthy exposition of the articles of the Catholic faith by the priest followed by a creedal interrogation of the sick person. The confession and absolution of sins follows. This pattern of profession and confession remains in the major revisions of the Book of Common Prayer, greatly simplified and patterned after the creedal interrogations of Christian Initiation. Pastoral Care includes this ritual unit in its rite of Visitation of the Sick. Both elements are also included in the Continuous Rite of Penance, Anointing, and Viaticum, though here confession and absolution precede the profession of baptismal faith. The creedal interrogations follow the text of the Apostles' Creed in Divine Worship: The Missal. The prominence of these creedal interrogations in the Visitation of the Sick, their ritual connection to confession and absolution, and their persistence throughout the Anglican tradition is one way that these rites differ from those of Rome. In introductory rubrics, the 1614 Roman Ritual directs priests to recite the Creed for the sick person and to elicit acts of faith from those who are dying. Pastoral Care of the Sick: Rites of Anointing and Viaticum includes the profession of baptismal faith at the reception of Holy Communion as Viaticum and immediately after confession and absolution in its Continuous Rite of Penance, Anointing, and Viaticum. Again, while not a feature of the post-conciliar Roman rites, the profession of faith's more frequent use is not excluded. As an introductory rubric of the Visitation of the Sick notes: "When visiting the sick, a Priest may construct a common prayer from appropriate elements in a form of brief celebration of the Word of God."⁸ This common prayer could certainly include the element of the profession of baptismal faith. Its more frequent use might assist the sick person in renewing baptismal faith and capacitate them for its ultimate profession at reception of Holy Communion as Viaticum.

Laying on of the hand(s) – Pastoral Care includes the laying on of hands in two distinct forms. In the Visitation of the Sick, the priest or deacon lays his hand on the sick person accompanied by an indicative formula and an oration. At Anointing, the Priest lays hands with an accompanying exorcistic oration immediately before anointing with oil and its deprecatory formula. Neither the rite used at Sarum nor the major revisions of the Book of Common Prayer include this element though it does begin to appear in 20th century Anglican books. The 1614 Roman Ritual includes a laying on of the hand with prayer at the end of its rites for Visitation of the Sick and an extension of the right hand over the head of the sick person at the exorcistic oration immediately before anointing. The post-conciliar rites incorporate this symbolic action at both Anointing and the Visitation of the Sick. At Anointing, this gesture is carried out in silence, shortly before the application of oil with prayer. At the Visitation of the Sick, this gesture may occur as the case requires. Pastoral Care's regular use of this symbolic action in the Visitation of the Sick highlights its importance for all Christian care of the sick.

Carmen Aguinaco Completes Term as Multicultural Specialist

Ms. Carmen Aguinaco, who has served as Multicultural Specialist of the Secretariat of Divine Worship since February 2016, has concluded her service with the USCCB and retired after decades of ministry with the Hispanic/Latino communities of the Church. Her final day at the Conference was August 20, 2021. She came to the USCCB with 30 years of experience as an author, editor, teacher, and translator, and worked in the past for Claretian Publications and the Instituto de Liderazgo Hispano of the University of St. Mary of the Lake. Before working in the Secretariat, Ms. Aguinaco served previously as a consultant to the Subcommittee on Divine Worship in Spanish, and at the Conference was its staff liaison.

In her five years with the USCCB, she provided key editorial work for the publication of the Misal Romano, tercera edición, an emended edition of the Ritual para el Bautismo de los niños, and two ritual texts planned for future publication, the Ritual de la Iniciación cristiana de adultos and the Bendicional. Ms. Aguinaco also contributed to the success of the V National Encuentro of Hispanic/Latino Ministry in 2018; based on the gathering's recommendations in the fields of liturgy and catechesis, she was instrumental in the launch of the Subcommittee's new Boletín earlier this year. While the authorship of USCCB Communications' Los santos del Misal Romano (store.USCCB.org/products/los-santos-del-misal-romano) has been officially anonymous, it can be revealed that Ms. Aguinaco wrote most of the text. Finally, she contributed in a very important way to the ongoing revision of the Biblia de la Iglesia en América, the Spanish-language liturgical Bible that will be the basis of a future U.S. Leccionario. The Secretariat wishes her a happy and well-earned retirement in her native Spain!
