CARA is a national, non-profit, Georgetown University affiliated research center that conducts social scientific studies about the Catholic Church. Founded in 1964, CARA has three major dimensions to its mission: to increase the Church's self-understanding, to serve the applied research needs of Church decision-makers, to advance scholarly research on religion, particularly Catholicism. CARA's longstanding policy is to let research findings stand on their own and never take an advocacy position or go into areas outside its social science competence.

The Catholic Church is a global faith with nearly 1.3 billion members. Less than 6 percent of the world's Catholics lives in the United States. There were few Catholics in the United States at its founding. Most Catholics in the United States can trace their ancestry to historical waves of immigration. In the 19th and much of the 20th century these immigrants most often came from European countries. In the last 50 years, immigration from all over the world has brought growing racial, ethnic, cultural, and linguistic diversity to parish life around the country. Nearly half of immigrants today are Catholic. Together, these diverse communities are worshipping in U.S. parishes in the 21st century. Today, Catholics are arguably one of the most cultural diverse populations in the United States. In February 2013 The Secretariat for Cultural Diversity in the Church of the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops (USCCB) commissioned the Center for Applied Research in the Apostolate (CARA) to estimate the size and distribution of Black or African American, Asian American or Pacific Islander, Hispanic or Latino, and American Indian or Alaskan Native Catholic populations in the United States, as well as the locations of Catholic parishes known to serve these communities.

Identifying Populations and Parishes

CARA utilized county-level U.S. Census data for 2010 to estimate total population sizes for these racial and ethnic groups of any religious affiliation.<sup>1</sup> These data were then aggregated within the boundaries of U.S. Catholic dioceses. Survey-based estimates for the Catholic affiliation percentage for each racial and ethnic group were then collected from recent and publicly available surveys.<sup>2</sup> Where possible, depending on sample sizes, CARA also estimated these percentages for each group within USCCB regions and U.S. Census regions. These estimates were averaged to create a national as well as specific regional Catholic percentage estimators for each group studied. These estimators were then applied to the population totals within each county, diocese, and region to produce a comprehensive set of Catholic population estimates by race and ethnicity.<sup>3</sup>

CARA identified parishes that self-identify as serving or are known to serve racial, ethnic, cultural, and/or linguistic groups in the United States. CARA combined a dozen databases of parish addresses and information, including some provided by the Secretariat. CARA then cleaned the database of duplicates and updated any missing or incorrect information.<sup>4</sup> This database of parishes is described and used here to identify how well the Church is serving

<sup>2</sup> Including surveys from the General Social Survey (GSS), Gallup, the Pew Research Center, and the World Values Study. USCCB regional estimates are drawn from Pew's 2007 Religious Landscape Survey. Pew's 2012 Asian-American Survey was used to estimate Catholic religious affiliation percentages for sub-groups of Asian or Pacific Islanders. Aggregated GSS surveys from 2000 to 2012 were also utilized for estimating religious affiliation for American Indians and Alaskan Natives. All groups had a minimum of two survey estimates of Catholic affiliation—most of which were very consistent across surveys. Pew's study of Global Christianity, the World Values Survey, the Annuario Statisticum Ecclesiae, and the CIA World Factbook were also consulted for estimates of Catholic affiliation in country of origin populations for comparison.

<sup>4</sup> These included lists of parishes cited in The Official Catholic Directory (OCD) as serving a particular ethnic community as well as parishes known to provide foreign language Masses from other CARA parish databases.

communities in counties with significant numbers of Catholics who are of different racial, ethnic, cultural, and linguistic communities and traditions.

Population Estimates

The table below shows U.S. Census population data for race, ethnicity, and country of origin from Census 2010 for 16 different sub-groups. The table also shows the estimated Catholic affiliation percentage and estimated Catholic population totals for each of these groups.

American Indian, Alaskan Native	2,932,248	536,601	18.3%

Approximately 42.5 million U.S. residents who self-identified as non-Hispanic white were estimated to be Catholic, representing about 21.6 percent of the 196.8 million people of this race and ethnicity in the country in 2010. This represented the single largest racial or ethnic group among Catholics in the United States.

Some 29.7 million U.S. residents who self-identified as Hispanic or Latino were estimated to be Catholic, representing about 58.9 percent of the 50.5 million people of this race and ethnicity in the country in 2010. About 16.0 million of the nation's Hispanic or Latino Catholics were to be born in the United States. Some 13.7 million were foreign-born.

<sup>5</sup> Due to significant numbers of Asian American, Native Hawaiian, and Pacific Islander Americans having multiple racial, ethnic, and ancestral identities, totals for sub-groups do not add to the total Asian American, Native Hawaiian, and Pacific Islander group population number. For example, the Census estimated the population of those self-identifying as Filipino alone in 2010 was 2.6 million. However, once one also includes those self-identifying as Filipino in combination with some other identity this population totals 3.4 million.

About 2.9 million U.S. residents who self-identified as Asian, Native Hawaiian, or Pacific Islander were estimated to be Catholic, representing about 19.1 percent of the 15.2 million people of this race and ethnicity in the country in 2010. This included an estimated 2.2 million Filipino Catholics, 483,600 Vietnamese Catholics, 340,900 Chinese Catholics, 199,700 Korean Catholics, 147,400 Native Hawaiian or Other Pacific Islander Catholics, 146,400 Indian Catholics, and 56,000 Japanese Catholics.<sup>6</sup> Some 76 percent of Asian, Native Hawaiian, or Pacific Islander Catholics were estimated to self-identify as Filipino (alone and in combination with other identities).

Approximately 2.9 million U.S. residents who self-identified as black, African American, African, or Afro-Caribbean were estimated to be Catholic, representing about 7.5 percent of the 38.9 million people of this race and ethnicity in the country in 2010. However, about 28 percent of this Catholic population group also self-identified as Hispanic or Latino (e.g., most often among Afro-Caribbean Catholic populations). The non-Hispanic African American, African, or Afro-Caribbean Catholic population was estimated to include 2.1 million people, representing about 5.6 percent of the 37.7 million people of this race and ethnicity. There were an estimated 330,000 Catholics who indicated they were born in a Sub-Saharan African country, representing about 26.4 percent of the 1.2 million U.S. residents reporting a place of birth in this region.

Some 536,600 U.S. residents who self-identify as American Indian or Alaskan Native are estimated to be Catholic, representing about 18.3 percent of the 2.9 million people of this race and ethnicity in the country.<sup>7</sup>

The Census Bureau's estimate for the total U.S. population on April 1, 2010, was 308,745,538. The Census mid-year 2013 estimate of the population was 316,252,750. Thus, the U.S. population is estimated to have grown by 2.4 percent or 7,507,212 from April 1, 2010 to July 15, 2013. There are no available estimates at this time that would allow one to gauge how much of this growth occurred among any racial, ethnic, or national sub-group.<sup>8</sup>

The table on the following pages shows population estimates updated to 2013, which were used for mapping populations and parishes.

<sup>6</sup> Some of these individuals identified with more than one Asian, Native Hawaiian, or Pacific Islander group. Adding these totals would double count some individuals. Thus, the total population of Asian, Native Hawaiian, or Pacific Islander is smaller than the sum of these sub-groups.

<sup>7</sup> Using seven waves of the General Social Survey (GSS) conducted from 2000 to 2012, CARA estimates that 18.3 percent of Native Americans self-identify as Catholic. This is based on the religious affiliation of respondents indicating that they are "American Indian or Alaskan Native" on the first of three race and ethnicity inquiries made in a survey interview. If one were to use all three references, Catholic affiliation falls to 11.9 percent. However, this broader group likely includes many who would not self-identify as American Indian or Alaskan Native on their Census form. If the 11.9 percent affiliation is used as an estimator, the number of American Indian or Alaskan Native Catholics is 348,938.

Culturally Diverse Parishes

CARA identified a total of 6,332 parishes that are known to serve a particular racial, ethnic, cultural, and/or linguistic community (35.9 percent of all U.S. parishes).<sup>10</sup> Some of these parishes serve two or three of these communities.<sup>11</sup> Accounting for this, a total of 6,570 communities were identified (as shown in the figure below).

<sup>9</sup> Due to significant numbers of Asian American, Native Hawaiian, and Pacific Islander Americans having multiple racial, ethnic, and ancestral identities, totals for sub-groups do not add to the total Asian American, Native Hawaiian, and Pacific Islander group population number.

<sup>10</sup> As noted previously, CARA and the Emerging Models of Pastoral Leadership Project estimated that there are approximately 6,700 multicultural parishes in the United States. It is important to note again that some of these sites are not canonical parishes and instead are missions or Catholic faith communities meeting in places other than a Catholic parish.

The largest number of these parishes, a total of 4,544, serve Hispanic or Latino Catholic communities. A total of 946 serve a European Catholic community (e.g., Italian, Polish, or Ukrainian) or another Catholic group not included in the other categories of the figure above. A total of 516 parishes were identified as serving black, African American, African, or Afro-Caribbean Catholics. Some 463 serve Asian, Native Hawaiian, or Pacific Islander Catholics. A total of 101 parishes were identified as serving American Indian or Alaskan Native Catholics. Maps on the following pages geocode the location of parishes and populations.<sup>16</sup>

Additionally, those parishes indicating ministry to the specific sub-group of the population mapped are identified as gold markers. This is done as many of the parishes serving Asian, Native Hawaiian and Other Pacific Islander are not identified by the specific communities they may serve.

In-Pew Surveys of Parishioners in Culturally Diverse Parishes

In August 2014, CARA began conducting in-pew surveys with parishioners at parishes identified by CARA in the first phase of the project.<sup>13</sup> A total of 118 parishes were invited to participate in the project with a goal of completing surveys in approximately 30 parishes. Thirty-five parishes declined to participate. Surveys were completed in 29 parishes as of May 2016. An additional 54 parishes had not declined, but had yet to complete the steps needed for participation before the study was completed.

The results shown here are for the 11,142 respondents, adults and teens, in the 29 participating parish communities. The sample includes four parishes serving primarily Hispanic or Latino communities; four serving primarily black, African American, African, or Afro-Caribbean communities; seven serving primarily Asian, Native Hawaiian, or other Pacific Islander communities; seven serving American Indian or Native Alaskan communities; and seven multicultural parishes serving multiple racial, ethnic, cultural, or linguistic communities.<sup>14</sup>

<sup>13</sup> Stratification is used in the random sampling to ensure geographic representation as well as reaching the broadest number of racial, ethnic, cultural, and linguistic groups.

<sup>14</sup> In some cases, a parish had been identified as a Hispanic parish or Asian parish in phase one of the project. However, upon completing the survey we discovered the parish is actually multicultural.

The table on the preceding page provides a detailed profile of the race, ethnicity, nationality and birth place of parishioner respondents.<sup>15</sup> For reliable reporting a sub-group must have at least 100 respondents. Not all respondents reported a place of birth.

There are substantial differences in the sizes of parishes by the types of communities they serve. The average parish primarily serving Hispanic or Latino Catholics had 805 respondents. By comparison, the average parish primarily serving American Indian or Native Alaskan Catholics had 74 respondents and Asian parishes had, on average, 260 respondents.

Overall 56 percent of respondents indicated having been born outside the United States. All respondents, regardless of place of birth, were asked, “What is the primary language used in your home?” Seven options were provided along with an “other” option where the respondent could specify a language that was not listed. A majority of respondents did not indicate use of English as the primary language at home (54 percent).

CARA translated the survey into 20 different languages other than English at the request of the pastors. Additionally, there were 19 languages that at least ten respondents indicated as the primary language in their home. The most common, other than English, were Spanish, Tagalog, Vietnamese, Ilocano, Korean, and Igbo.

Background and Demographics

The median age for all respondents is 52. The median age for non-Hispanic white Catholics in the pews in culturally diverse parishes is 62. By comparison the median age for Hispanic Catholics is 42. Median ages for other groups are in the middle to early 50s. The largest segment of parishioners in multicultural parishes (37 percent) are of the Post-Vatican II Generation (born 1961 to 1981) and are between the ages of 34 and 54. Eighteen percent are Millennials (born 1982 or later), 33 percent are of the Vatican II Generation (born 1943 to 1960), and 12 percent are of the Pre-Vatican II Generation (born before 1943).

<sup>15</sup> Respondents provided their race or ethnicity, place of birth, and language used at home. Using all of these pieces of information sub-groups of respondents are identified. Multi-racial respondents selected more than one race group (excluding Hispanic or Latino, an ethnicity).

Parishioners are 61 percent female and 39 percent male. This is not unusual for in-pew surveys of Catholic parishes. The largest gender gap is among black or African American respondents who were born in the U.S. This sub-group is 72 percent female and 28 percent male. Vietnamese respondents are majority male (54 percent).

	Male	Female
All Respondents:	39%	61%
Hispanic or Latino	39	61

American Indian, Native Alaskan	38	62
Non-Hispanic white	41	59

They typical respondent is married (70 percent) and has one child living in their home. Those with school age children are much more likely to enroll children in a Catholic school than the Catholic population. This is to be expected as all respondents are Mass attenders. Enrollment of children among parents with school-age children is very common among multi-racial and Vietnamese respondents (42 percent and 39 percent, respectively). This is least common among foreign-born Hispanic or Latino parents (22 percent).

Religious Practice

Respondents who have ever married are especially likely to have married in the Church. Majorities of all sub-groups indicate this. Again, this is expected as all respondents are Mass attenders. Vietnamese Catholics are most likely to have married in the Church (93 percent) and Korean respondents are least likely to have done so (55 percent). The later are among the most likely to have converted to Catholicism and may have married before this change.

Eighty-three percent of respondents have received their First Communion and 77 percent have been confirmed. Fifteen percent have received the Anointing of the Sick at some point in life. There are some variations between sub-groups. Korean respondents are the least likely to have received their First Communion (70 percent).<sup>16</sup> Hispanic and non-Hispanic white respondents are the most likely to have received this (91 percent and 94 percent, respectively).

<sup>16</sup> More Korean respondents indicate being confirmed than receiving their First Communion. Many Korean respondents are converts to Catholicism and may have experienced sacraments simultaneously upon entering the Church.

Have you received...

CARA asked respondents. What best describes you? Active Catholic, returned Catholic, convert, inactive Catholic, or non-Catholic. Respondents could select one of these. Three in four (76 percent) say they are “active Catholics.” Nine percent are “returned Catholics” who may have left the faith for a period of time and have now returned. Eight percent indicate they are “converts” to Catholicism. Two percent are “non-Catholics,” most often attending Mass with a Catholic relative. Five percent are “inactive Catholics.” These respondents, although in the pews, may consider themselves to be inactive because they are infrequent attenders, not receiving Communion, or because they are attending Mass with an active Catholic and do not regularly practice their Catholic faith otherwise.

Asian, Native Hawaiian and other Pacific Islander respondents are most likely to consider themselves to be “active Catholics” (82 percent). American Indian and Native Alaskan respondents are most likely to identify as a returned Catholic (22 percent). Black, African American, African, or Afro-Caribbean respondents are most likely to identify as converts (13 percent).

Although Asian, Native Hawaiian and other Pacific Islander respondents were the most likely to identify themselves as active Catholics, these parishioners also report the least personal involvement in ministries or activities (81 percent are not involved in any). Black, African American, African, and Afro-Caribbean parishioners are the most likely to report personal involvement in ministries and activities (half are active in at least one).

Fifty-nine percent of non-Hispanic white parishioners are not involved in any ministries or activities other than Mass. As shown in the table on the next page, non-Hispanic white parishioners are also significantly less likely than others in culturally diverse parishes to say they are “very much” interested in a variety of parish programs, ministries, or activities.

Parishioner Interest in Parish Programs
Percentage responding “very much” interested
	Hispanic or Latino	Asian, Native Hawaiian, or other Pacific Islander	Black, African American, African, or Afro-Caribbean	American Indian or Native Alaskan	Multi-racial	Non-Hispanic white

Overall, 67 percent of respondents are registered with their parish and 83 percent say this is their primary place of worship. A majority, 52 percent, live closer to another Catholic parish. This likely means many are “driving by” their territorial parish to attend the parish they were surveyed in. This may be because this parish best serves their needs.

Black, African American, African, and Afro-Caribbean parishioners and multi-racial parishioners are the most likely to be registered with their parish (81 percent each) and Asian, Native Hawaiian, and other Pacific Islanders are the least likely to have done so (59 percent). American Indian and Native Alaskan parishioners (40 percent), Non-Hispanic white parishioners (44 percent), and Hispanic or Latino parishioners are the least likely to drive by their territorial parish to attend Mass elsewhere. Majorities attend at their territorial parish. Black, African American, African, Afro-Caribbean parishioners (62 percent), Asian, Native Hawaiian, and other Pacific Islander parishioners (58 percent), and multi-racial parishioners (56 percent) are most likely to attend a parish that is not closest to their home. Majorities of each group attend parishes that are more distant than their local parish community.

Cultural Diversity

Two key questions on the survey capture opinions about growing diversity and the parish’s recognition of this. Respondents were asked if their parish should be more involved in celebrating cultural diversity and if they would like to see more diversity in their parish. The figure on the following page shows how many respondents “strongly agreed” with both statements. Majorities of only four groups “strongly agreed” that they would like to see more diversity in their parish: foreign-born black, African, Afro-Caribbean Catholics (66 percent), foreign-born Hispanic, Latino, or Latina Catholics (54 percent), Vietnamese Catholics (60 percent), and Filipino Catholics (59 percent). Only 20 percent of non-Hispanic white Catholics “strongly agree” with this statement. Responses to the two statements are correlated. Those who want to see their parish more involved in celebrating cultural diversity also would like to see more diversity in their parish.

Eighty-three percent of respondents agree “somewhat” or “strongly” that parishioners at their parish are eager to understand different cultures in their parish community. Korean, U.S. born Hispanic or Latino, and U.S. born Non-Hispanic white respondents are least likely to “strongly” agree with this statement (31 percent, 25 percent, and 25 percent, respectively). Majorities of the following sub-groups agree “strongly”: Filipino respondents (55 percent), foreign-born black, African, or Afro-Caribbean respondents (53 percent), and Vietnamese respondents (51 percent).

More than nine in ten respondents (94 percent) agree at least “somewhat” that having people of different cultural backgrounds enriches their parish. Korean respondents are the least likely to “strongly” agree with the statement (32 percent). U.S. born black or African American respondents are most likely to strongly agree (78 percent).

One in four parishioners (24 percent) agrees at least “somewhat” that they feel like an outsider in their parish because of their nationality, race, ethnicity, language, or culture. This is most common among foreign-born Hispanic or Latino respondents (36 percent) and multi-racial respondents (32 percent). U.S. born black or African American respondents are most likely to “strongly” disagree (76 percent).

Ninety-two percent of respondents agree “somewhat” or “strongly” that their parish is welcoming to members of different nationalities, cultures, races, and ethnicities. Those in parishes primarily serving black Catholics are most likely to “strongly” agree that their parish is welcoming to members of different nationalities, cultures, races, and ethnicities (82 percent).

Respondents were asked if their parish should be more involved in welcoming a variety of groups. The table below shows results for four racial and ethnic groups and how people of seven different races and ethnicities responded. Generally, Hispanic or Latino parishioners are more likely than those of any other sub-group to believe their parish should be more welcoming to other groups—even parishioners who are members of these groups. For example, 72 percent of Hispanic parishioners “strongly agree” that their parish should be more welcoming to African American and African Catholics. No other sub-group of parishioners is more likely to “strongly agree.”

My parish should be more involved in welcoming...

Seventy-two percent of respondents agree at least “somewhat” that parishioners talk openly about cultural diversity in the parish. Foreign-born Hispanic or Latino respondents are most likely to agree “strongly” that parishioners do this (47 percent).

Eighty-four percent of parishioners agree “somewhat” or “strongly” that parishioners of different cultures participate in parish life together. Those worshipping in a parish serving black Catholics are especially likely to strongly agree with this statement (55 percent). Vietnamese respondents are also especially likely to “strongly” agree (57 percent). U.S. born Non-Hispanic white, Korean, and American Indian or Native Alaskan parishioners are among the least likely to “strongly” agree (36 percent, 17 percent, and 36 percent, respectively).

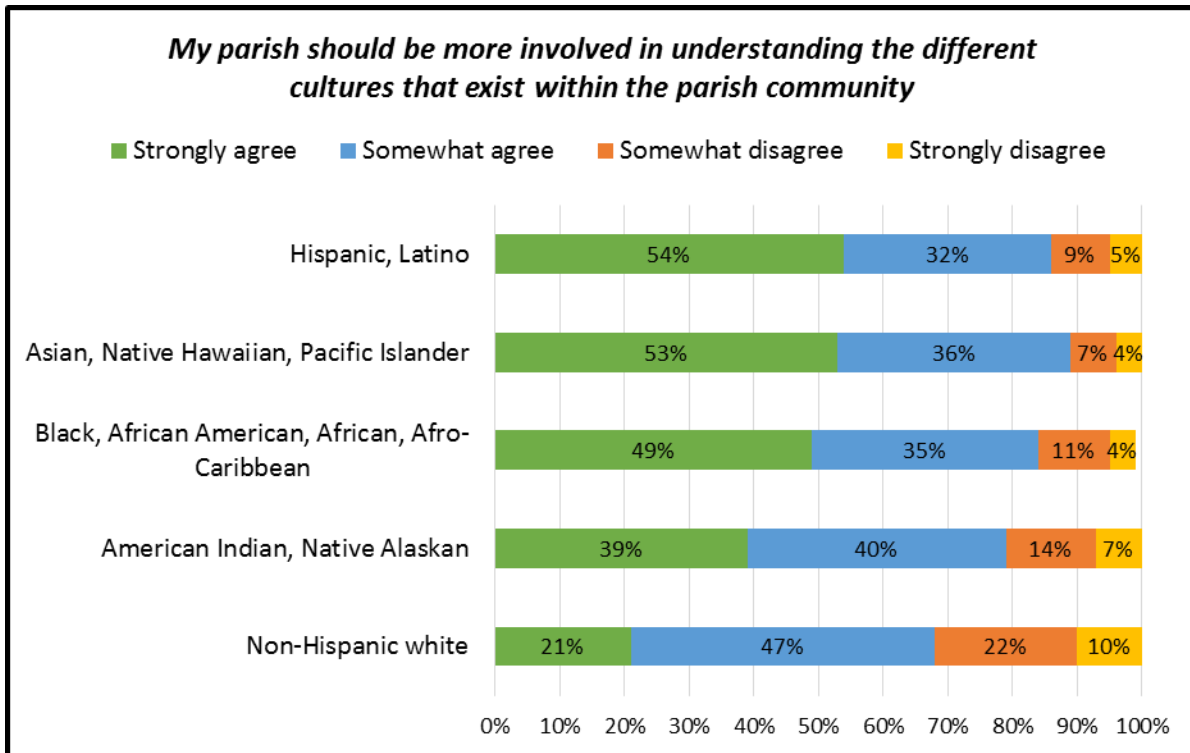

Overall, three in ten parishioners (31 percent) agree at least “somewhat” that there is some tension between different cultural groups in the parish. Hispanic or Latino parishioners are most likely to “somewhat” agree with this statement (38 percent) and non-Hispanic white respondents are the least likely to do so (29 percent).

Forty-six percent of respondents agree “somewhat” or “strongly” that their parish celebrates differently than many other Catholic parishes in the United States. Nearly seven in ten parishioners (69 percent) in parishes serving black Catholics responded as such.

Eighty-six percent of parishioners agree “somewhat” or “strongly” that they would like more parish events that bring together parishioners of different nationalities, ethnicities, languages, cultures, and races. Foreign-born Hispanic or Latino parishioners are most likely to “strongly” agree with this statement (66 percent). Non-Hispanic white parishioners are least likely to “strongly” agree with this statement (30 percent).

Eighty-two percent of parishioners agree at least “somewhat” that their parish should be more involved in understanding the different cultures that exist within the parish community. U.S. born Non-Hispanic white parishioners are the least likely to agree “strongly” with this (21 percent). Hispanic or Latino respondents are the most likely to respond as such (54 percent).

Eighty-eight percent of respondents agree “somewhat” or “strongly” that parishioners worship and share together as one community. Parishioners in parishes serving black Catholics are especially likely to “strongly” agree with this statement (69 percent).

Eighty-eight percent of respondents agree “somewhat” or “strongly” that their parish encourages a dialogue and collaboration among various cultures. Foreign-born Hispanic or Latino parishioners are especially likely to “strongly” agree with this statement (68 percent). Korean respondents are least likely to respond as such (21 percent).

Conclusions and Implications

The Catholic Church in the United States is one of the most culturally diverse institutions in the country and it will become even more diverse in the future. Parishes, schools and colleges, hospitals, charities, and other ministries need to adapt and prepare for this growing diversity. In the pews, many of those who are most comfortable with growing diversity are those who immigrated to the United States or are the children of foreign-born parents. Those who are descendants of older waves of immigration from Europe appear to be the less comfortable and less willing to engage in parish life beyond attending Mass.

Some of these trends reported here represent challenges to building a sense of community in parishes. At the same time the results of this study reveal extraordinary opportunities for the Church. The global community of Catholics can be witnessed in the pews of many parishes in this country. Few other institutions in the United States are as culturally diverse as the Catholic Church.
